ingful negotiations were back on the tracks in the regional strikelockout dispute, thanks in part to an undisclosed new union package proposal, the Canadian Union of Public Employees has reacted in juvenile fashion, expanding picketing to school district maintenance shops and disrupting domestic gas shipments which fuel 7,000 Island customers. In a surprise move Monday, Greater Victoria School board janitors, who are also CUPE members, struck, a move that will result in the closing of Victoria schools for all but one hour or so a

The situation is this: a union has effectively closed the city's schools: by issuing passes - something that is more usually the precinct of elected authorities - it, controls railway cars bringing liquefied gas to 7,000 local customers; it has closed down area recreational facilities and halted garbage collection. The regional chaos the public is now being subjected to is because a union does not think it is getting high enough wages. A nonelected, non-appointed group is in a sense holding the people of this area to ransom. It is an intolerable situation

Agreed, the region with its medieval strategies and psychological ploys, including a week's delay in weighing the pros and cons of CUPE's offer, has aided and abetted the events of recent days which might be called union retaliation. Perhaps the school closing is an attempt to force government intervention as it must be hard to keep picket line spirits up to snuff on $28 to $35 per week. Whatever the reasons, CUPE is out of line, way out of line. Who runs the region anyway? The people through its elected officials, or a union that has set itself up as a Kapkaesque authority issuing passes to all those who cross its path? The situation has gone beyond the bounds of an ordinary labor dispute.

To focus anger on janitors, out side workers or any of the region's locked out inside workers is wrong. Like everybody else, they are wrestling with an annual inflation rate of 12 per cent. And it would be wrong if CUPE didn't work hard to negotiate the best deal possible for its members. Conversely, the region is duty bound to save area taxpayers as much money as possible. But when a union holds the public to ransom, and sets up its own ad hoc authority to issue passes, we are indeed at a bad impasse. As in most labor management matters in our imperfect society there does not seem to be a middle ground. But when the majority interest is sacrificed to the minority's demands, something is bound to break. In this case, and in the larger federal Public Service Alliance of Canada, where 75 grain weighers have halted Canada's export grain trade, the backlash will inevitably fall on the union.

These are difficult times in Canada. Old class lines based on education, prestigious occupations and money are breaking down. Everybody is righteous about getting his share of the economic profits as we drift into selfishness masquerading as socialism, a socialism that would make J. S. Woodsworth blush. But the union rip-off is looming as large in the public mind as the corporate rip-off. The public as victim has had about enough. If CUPE and other unions continue to compromise the public interest in the manner which we are witnessing in the regional strikelockout, they will inevitably find themselves legislated into weaker positions, just as the larger corporations are finding themselves more and more under government's thumb. Employer or employee, life is not a one-way street.

This Thursday, CUPE and the region meet again. If there is a shred of hope in the new CUPE package regional negotiators should keep meetings going. During the course of this dispute there has been too much games playing by both sides. But the latest instances of CUPE's toying with the public interest are irresponsible and may come full circle, ensuring that government employees do not have the right to strike again.

Art Is Life and Vice Versa

That benevolent patron of the arts, the Canada Council, has announced the latest grants under its Explorations program, which differs from its usual giveaways to artists and writers in that even rank amateurs may apply. Only requirement is an imaginative project which deals with "a Canadian situation, or which has strong implications for Canadians."

Some 68 lucky people (out of 219 applicants) will share $286,-948. Among them, a Chesterville, Ont., man will get $5,000 to study the role of the harmonica in the social culture of Canada and another individual in Edmonton will receive $6,000 to investigate and interpret reports of UFOs across

The biggest grant of $13,000 goes to the Evelyn Roth Moving Sculpture Co. of Vancouver, headed by a woman who, ah, knits things out of old videotape discarded by television stations. Honest. Hats, dresses, even an entire awning sort of thing for the Vancouver art gal-

Right here in Victoria, Yetta Lees will get a cheque for $2,500 to explore and record the psychological, emotional and artistic effects of color in the performing arts. A Montreal woman will get $4,600 to interview prominent women writers in Canada and abroad on the influence of contemporary society on their lives.

How about something really artistically innovative? Say along the lines of average housewife documents effects of inflation on her day-to-day life? Or arts and crafts for old age pensioners, waiting out the last days of the month until the next cheque comes? Goodness, there must be loads of "Canadian situations" out there with "strong implications for Canadians.'

Winter Wasted

As the mother of a Victoria figure skater, I object strongly to losing all our ice time due to the current labor dispute. In figure skating we pay $3.50 to $4 for a 15-minute lesson and also extra for our patches, to do figures on, at $1.50 each patch. This all adds up to an expensive sport and I think it is extremely unfair after these children have worked hard all winter, that they should suddenly be deprived of all ice, right before tests. Those families who can afford to buy into the Raquet Club and then pay $37 per month still have ice, but those of us who depend on the city and the municipal sport centres are just plain out of luck, and it is a winter wasted. I am sure there are hundreds of parents of minor hockey players who feel the same as I do. It is the children of Victoria who are the losers in this present dispute.

As a very disgusted taxpayer, all I can say is please get down to business and talk. Both sides have had their fun being on television and radio. Let's end these "ego trips" and re-open our sports centres. They were intended for everyone not just the Cougars and major events.-Mrs. A. Weisgarber, 1154 Tol-

To the Point

Ever since your first To the Point appeared - and that is quite some time ago, isn't it? - I have felt that urge to write so that you may know that, yes, there are people out there who read what you have written and who like it sufficiently well to look forward to the next piece as soon as they have finished

As you know, a writer or speaker is right if he expresses our own thoughts on a subject. You are right in your barbed comments about our fetish You know it, I know it, and there must be thousands more who know it, but it won't make any difference, because the readers, a paper's clientele, are sacred -you could only write whatever you want to write as long as they want your paper. Page four is pretty safe stuff, for nobody reads it.

As a teacher I know what sports do to all those who have never been a member on any school team, and I have reason to believe the damage is far greater than the benefits. It doesn't matter, nothing

It doesn't matter when some sports ommentator like Bill Good Jr. speaks out in public against violence in hockey. for it is part and parcel of the game and the vicarious involvement of the crowd that watches.

It doesn't matter that the Olympic Games will likely cost all of us more than they could possibly be worth, as long as Canada can warm itself in the warm glow reflected from a few gold

It doesn't matter what we think or say or write, but, by God, we'd better keep on speaking and writing. Thank you for doing just that. - Just Havelaar, 51 Kingham' Place.

Police Petition

This headline Petition Touches Nerve on page one of your Feb. 12 issue is apposite, but not perhaps in the sense intended; the "nerve" is that of your staff writer for his amazing impudence in quizzing the police, for which he deserved the proverbial "swift kick" but that would have produced screaming banner headlines of police brutality. Had he tried similar tactics at, say, a trade union headquarters, he would have been lucky to get out alive; and also for his cheap attempt at sarcasm regarding the wording of the petition, which only point up his ignorance of normal procedure.

All respect is due to those opponents of capital punishment who genuinely believe that it is wrong to take life in any circumstances (although this stand is hard to reconcile with the support so many of these same people give to political extremists who kill indiscriminately #### to gain their ends), but the issue is a Minds and Pectorals moral, not a political one, and the insinuation that the police are meddling in May I comment on some of the com

money for such oddities as hotel accomnodation for Victoria ping pong players." I would castigate any student of mine who used the pejorative meta-phor "shovelled" in this context. The use of such cliches in newspapers does make the task of the English teacher more difficult. The principal issue is, however, that the Winter Festival promotes the tourist industry, not physical fitness.

It's easier to achieve these goals when wealthy Liberals build you a swimming pool in your own house." I agree with this criticism of Mr. Trudeau. In every centre of government activity where large numbers of people sit on treir buttocks for eight hours a day transferring papers from the in to the out basket, physical fitness, facilities should be available so that all public servants may prevent premature atrophy of their muscles.

"Why must we instil in our children this idea of competitive sport mayhem." Implicit in this statement is the assumption that school physical education instils the idea. Last Saturday I observed two of my students engaged in field hockey at Beacon Hill Park. No mayhem. In September I travelled with our school cross country team to Hurricane Ridge above Port Angeles. Over 300 athletes from 40 schools competed. No mayhem Last November I observed the island high school swimming finals in Port Alberni. Much enjoyable recreation but no mayhem. Competitive sports mayhem stems not from the athletes but from their exploitation for profit, in the case of the National Hockey League, or for political prestige, in the case of Jean Drapeau. "Can't we at least leave one's body up to the individual?" No we can't. Individuals are too stupid to be trusted with the care of their own bodies In my youth I despised athletes whom I categorized as persons of large muscles and small -cerebrums. I devoted myself to the fine arts, music and literature. As a result I had four myocardial infarctions (heart attacks) in my mid-30s, at much cost to me, my family, and to the state for medical services. Leave the body to the individual student and he or she lounges in the washroom smoking a cigarette while the cholestoral thickens in the coronary artery and the tar deposits thicken in the lungs

It need not be Minds Versus Pectorals. A good school system should develop both and a good society should value the individual who cares about both. Why just this last term I had as a student a rugby player who wrote well. Hope springs eternal. — G. H. Kelly, 837 Royal Oak Avenue.

legitimate request that the existing lav

The editorial Controlling Firearms which appeared in the Times Feb. 12

surely deserves some further comment The writer points out that gun registration has not worked in other countries in preventing crime and I must certainly agree on this point. He then goes on to say that perhaps there could be more rigorous standards for possessing sport-

This suggests to me that the writer is looking for some new approach because obviously registration won't work. So it is suggested that instead of registration we control possession of shotguns and hunting rifles. On the surface it may sound reasonable to screen the owners of sporting rifles and guns but once again that would involve, at very considerable cost, tens of thousands of trustworthy people who use firearms in competitions or for hunting.

Moreover, simply determining whether the owner had a criminal record would not be sufficient because such a record can be acquired rather easily in ways not related to firearms. In British Columbia all persons acquiring their first hunting licence must take a course The qualified instructors of the C.O.R.E. program would certainly not pass someone who is obviously mentally unsound. Surely the writer is not suggesting that all gun owners or hunters should be submitted to psychiatric testing.

I take real exception to the statement on a more thoughtful level, the reason for which most people purchase firearms, namely hunting, is fast diminishing." Really, is this a thoughtful statement when there are over 135,000 hunters in British Columbia and interest in hunting is increasing, not decreasing? Let's not look at the house-ridder hunting areas of yester-year and think this applies to anything but a small part of B.C. The writer states, "hunting, except in nether regions, is becoming impossible and dangerous to man.' facts are that hunting accidents are decreasing, not increasing, so we can hardly say hunting is dangerous to man.

I suggest he look at Europe where there is more hunting and more game killed in densely populated areas by far ference I suspect, is that the criminal use of firearms in many foreign countries carries a heavier penalty than in Canada. In my opinion, this is the ap proach we should press for in preventing crimes involving any kinds of weapons and not the control of recreational firearms. - J. Hatter, 3931 Tudor Ave-

In its discussion of the memoranda tabled in the house the Times in no way wished to impugn Dr. Keenleyside's credibility.

Trouble Ahead for Bourassa

gical order.

On Dec. 3, Premier Bourassa arrived in Paris. Le Monde, France's foremost and one of the world's better political newspapers, gave front-page play to an nterview with him, and devoted 20 of the paper's 42 pages that day to Quebec.

The premier was also given full headof-state treatment - lunch at the Elysee Palace, talks at l'Hotel Matignon, dinner at Quai d'Orsay, the French foreign ministry. It was a sign that what the French call le flirt between Quebec and France did not die with DeGaulle.

It was the Le Monde interview how ever, that raised political eyebrows here. "Canada is a common market," the premier said. On export of enriched urani um, he said Quebec is in the position of power while Ottawa is but a "customs

On culture, the premier told Le Monde that "the most important element of my cultural sovereignty policy is Bill 22, which makes French the official language of Quebec. The application of this law inevitably presupposes close political relations with France.

Common Market?

Then, early in January, Mr. Bourassa extended his common market statement in Le Monde Diplomatique, a periodical published by the Paris daily. An article carrying Mr. Bourassa's byline was headlined: "A French State within the Canadian Common Market."

In itself, Mr. Bourassa's use of the vords common market, was unexceptional and, indeed, a fairly accurate scription of one, narrow element of Con-

But in Quebec the phrase has special meaning, particularly when combined with the words "a French State." That is the slogan of the Parti Quebecois and the heart of the PQ's strategy to make se-

Mr. Bourassa's deliberate use of the words prompted the Montreal Star's perceptive Quebec editor. Dominique Clift, to write an article which appeared on Jan. 16 wondering about Mr. Bourassa's motives. The article was headlined "Bourassa's Borrowed Clothes."

The article was read closely here in

, Mr. Clift wrote a second article head lined "Bourassa on the Road to Constitutional Confrontation." It, too, was read closely here and is considered one of the sounder analyses of Mr. Bourassa's in-

Meanwhile, on Jan. 31, two things happened. In the morning, a brown envelope arrived at the Toronto Globe and Mail's Ottawa office. It contained confidential documents, source unknown, outlining federal concern about Mr. Bourassa's uranium enrichment plans for James Bay.

Subsequent events indicate it was a deliberate leak, engineered either by Energy Minister Macdonald or Prime Minister Trudeau himself to weigh public opinion into balance against the uranium

The second thing that happened was a speech by Mr. Trudeau to 3,000 Liberals at a fund-raising dinner in Montreal. The immediate, public impact of that speech flowed from some comments he made in English. But it is now generally agreed that the more important part of the speech was in French, that it was aimed at Mr. Bourassa and that it constituted an important federal response to developing events in Quebec.

Mr. Bourassa was not named, howev er, and in the Quebec press Mr. Trudeau's words were interpreted, to the astonishment of his aides, as an attack on separatists.

In the context of Mr. Bourassa's interview with Le Monde and his article in Le Monde Diplomatique, however, there was no mistaking the prime minister's target was Mr. Bourassa.

Mr. Trudeau warned that Quebecers had been trapped by words before. 'Now," he said, "we hear talk of a Ca nadian common market - a French state in the Canadian common market. "Canada is more than a commor market. It is a country where one helps the other. There are years when others help us but there are years when we, we of this province, help the others.'

And Mr. Trudeau made a sharp statement on Quebecs' language policy It is understood, he said, the Quebec will be French, "but what is also under stood, if one wants to remain Liberal, is cophones demand for French minorities

"There is not a democracy that can survive if it crushes the rights of minori-And that is fundamental - that applies in every area."

A day later, on Feb. 1, Mr. Trudeau had a weekend meeting with Mr. Bourassa. One of the issues raised was the uranium enrichment project and, subsequently, on Feb. 4, Mr. Trudeau made it clear in the Commons that he does not favor the project.

Meanwhile, events with Quebec were

On Feb. 12, Roger Lemelin, editor of La Presse, largest French language daily in North America, pre-empted page one for an unusual, signed editorial. It was a biting attack of Mr. Bourassa's performance as premier.

Power Corp. Involved

A day later, the small but influential daily, Le Devoir, called the editorial "a political event of singular importance." Le Jour, the separatist paper, reported the editorial on page one.

What made it important is only partly related to the fact the flamboyant Mr. Lemelin seldom signs editorial. But Le Devoir also noted that Le Presse is the flagship of the Power Corporation publications and the Power Corporation is synonymous with Liberalism in Quebec. Le Devoir found it impossible to conceive that Mr. Lemelin would have taken a step of "such gravity" without clearance from Paul Desmarais, who it called "l'empereur de Power Corporation."

Lemelin moreover, is a close friend of the long-time patron of Quebec Liberals - Transport Minister Marchand. One line of speculation is that Mr. Bourassa has lost the support of the financial community and federal Liberals, who once viewed him as the only alternative to separatism but who would now like him dumped.

Another is that the prime minister's speech was an attempt to get the pre-mier to doff the borrowed clothes of separatist rhetoric and return to the federalist fold.

Hard judgments are difficult to come by. But there is sense of foreboding here and the chronology suggests that we are seeing signs of a gathering storm.

FitzSimon's Who's He? Question Here in '69

It was August of 1969 and around Uplands Golf Club they were asking: Pat FitzSimons! Who's he? This was the occasion of the B.C. Open and a skinny 18-year-old youngster who was packing his own bag had just barged around the course in a four-under par 66 (34-32), and was one stroke behind the tournament leader, Bill Wakeham.

Sunday, across the United States and in many parts of Canada too, people were asking the same question and even the TV announcers were making sure they pronounced his name correctly. It was the same person they were talking name correctly. It was the same person they were talking about: Pat FitzSimons from Salem, Ore. He had just won one of the most prestigious of golf's championships, the Los Angeles Open. He had won it in the clear, by four strokes, with a nine-under-par 275, and he had equalled the championship record established by the redoubtable Ben Hogan. And he's all of 24 years of age.

And he's all of 24 years of age.

But let's see now, back in 1969 he was just another name, a youngster with a record that shouldn't have been overlooked, but it was. He had previously won the Oregon Open championship and also the Northwest Open, so he had some credentials. But the next day a local radio announcer suggested that he probably wouldn't be up there in contention for very long, the competition being what it was. Later Vaughn Trapp of Oak Bay told Gorde Hunter not to count out this kid, he was a great golfer.

There Was Also Brian Who?

So the 1969 Open went on to its conclusion. Wakeham So the 1969 Open went on to its conclusion. Wakeham eventually won the title, but had to fire a 66 on the final day for his winning 203 total. And guess who was in the second place? Pat FitzSimons. He had had followed his opening 66 with a 69 and then a par 70 on the final day to earn a tie with Montreal's Kén Fulton at 205. Then it was back to school, at Oregon, for FitzSimons, in the fall. Lately, his name has been cropping up from time to time and naturally, was readily recalled.

Now perhaps he's on the threshhold of better things, and that would be nice, because there were stories floating about at the time of the B.C. Open that some of the golfers, including FitzSimons, were sleeping out because the weather was warm and they didn't have the funds for proper accommodation. But such is the way of golf. And, besides, that particular B.C. Open was also famous for a couple of other events.

Maybe, you remember Brian Bond. Brian who? Yes, he was another of the stars of the piece that year, and if Fitz-Simons has gone ahead, it is believed that Bond is still a prosomewhere in the Toronto area. But he had his day here. He had arrived just the day before the Pro-Am, had grabbed a taxi from the Pat Bay Airport to Uplands (the tariff was $91 and barely had time to get in nine holes, the front nine, before darkness.

A Pair of Seven-Unders

The next day, under a shotgun start, Bond started at 10 The next day, under a shotgun start, Bolio started at 10 which a birdie and when he had completed the back nine, which he had never seen before, he had also scored birdies on 13, 14, 16 and 17 and had a five-under-par 30 to show for his efforts. He then birdied seven and nine on the front side for a new course record of 63. Fred Wood and Chuck Congden had shared the previous record of 65. This was on

But that wasn't all. Also on the course that day was the merry madcap of the links, Moe Norman. And what did he do but promptly equal Bond's performance with a seven-under 63. Each won $130 for his efforts.

Which wasn't much, but then things were different then

Short ribs were 39 cents, bacon 79 cents, Eaton's Birkdale shoes for men were on sale for $9.99 and you got a Plymouth Fury convertible for $4,330.

Otherwise, Buck Houle (now Toros) has just been appointed general manager of Hockey Canada, the Socreds had called an election; Bill Poltz had pitched his third win for Strathcona Hotel in the B.C. junior softball championship, Charley Finley was in trouble with American League pres-Joe Cronin for having his organist strike up a tunwhen the opposing pitcher was ready to deliver a pitch, and They had just reactivated fullback Leroy Sledge on a five-

By DR. WALTER C. ALVAREZ

The carpal tunnel is the space under the bridge-like tissue that runs across on the palmar side of the base of then hand, from the base of the thumb to the opposite lit-tle-finger side of the hand. Under that bridge goes an important nerve to the thumb side of the hand. If there is some arthritis under the little bridge, the nerve can be hurt. Sometimes it is necessary for a surgeon to operate and clean out the space.

In a paper in the "Journal of Bone and Joint Surgery" for January, 1973, Drs. J. W. Frymoyer and J. Bland of Burlington Vermont relate how, in 11 cases of carpal tunnel syndrome, the patient was dull and feeling cold, due to a lack of proper function of the thyroid gland in the neck just below the voice box. By giving thyroid substance, the doctors quickly relieve the carpal tunnel symptons of the eleven patients.

VASECTOMY STERILITY As most people know today, there are two vas deferens

(tubes that carry spermatozoa from the testes up to a the urinary bladder). If the tubes are cut and tied, the man should soon be sterile, but in a few cases, a few nonmotile spermatozoa may be found for a time ranging up to

Telephone 388-6116

As Dr. Sumner Marshall of the University of California School of Medicine in San Francisco said a while ago, although it is highly unlikely that a man could impregnate a woman as a result of the presence of such a rare nonmotile sperm, he is not sure that a post-vasectomy patient is sterile until the patient has had at least 16 ejaculations and has produced two consecutive sperm-free specimens, the last one at least four months after the vasectomy.

This means, of course, that in order to be safe, the patient should go back to his doctor and get checked a few times

SHOCK TREATMENTS People write to ask if it ould be possible for a depressed person to have too many shock treatments, and I think it could be. Usually, my patients (whom I turned over to good psychiatrists) were much better after having per-haps 5, 7 or 10 electroshocks. Commonly, when the patient was given another half dozen or dozen treatments, the results were not so good.

LOSS OF BALANCE

Many persons, nearly all of them over 60 or 70, complain that their sense of balance is not as good as it was in their youth. Other people cannot re-member having had a little stroke, but they may tell me a story of failing memory, failing ability, and an aging which shows that there has been a little injury to the brain, probably due to hardening and narrowing of a small artery.

In other cases, along with the loss of good balance there has come enough failure of hearing to show that the person is having trouble with the balancing mechanism in the internal ear, and may be developing a Meniere's disease.

What is sad is that so often a poor sense of balance goes with aging, and we do cannot turn back the hands of the clock.

CARBUNCLE

Some men write asking about carbuncles. A carbuncle is cores. In the old days, the doctor generally opened it by making a cross-like cut through the top of it. Most carbuncles are on the back of the neck. Today the doctor is likely to use an antibiotic to get rid of the infection, which

Toy Buyers Showing Trend of Depression

NEW YORK (UPI) ta's been shopping here for the toys he'll deliver next Dec. 25. Like the rest of us, he's finding prices higher and he's being somewhat cautious. Officials at the National Toy Fair, where buyers from all over the U.S. view the industry's wares each February, say parents, footing Santa's bill, can expect to pay 8 to 10 per cent more for toys during 1975.

Although dollar volume hit the $3 billion mark in 1974, most of them called the 6 to 10 per cent sales gain "disappointing" and not enough to keep up with the rate of inflation. They are shooting for at least a 10 per cent gain this year, despite the recession.

Inflation and recession have made their mark on the in-dustry that does a large per-centage of its business in the first four months of the year. Consumer buying patterns have changed, and several

Dikes said high costs of maferials labor and costs of maferials, labor and advertising have made an ex-panded product line too risky and uneconmical

The retail toy business does about 55 per cent of its dollar volume in the November-December Christmas season,

There are now hundreds of thousands — probably millions — of home winemakers happily practicing their favorite hobby in all sections of the United States and Canada. And every one of them, it sometimes seems, has his or her own "special" secret reci-pe that's guaranteed (at least in the mind of its owner) to create a fermented drink which is obviously superior to anything anyone else might

And I do mean "almost anything". Grapes, pears, peaches, plums, blackberries, cherries, strawberries, clover, potatoes, tomatoes, carrots..., virtually any fruit, vegetable, or herb which contains simple sugars can be turned simple sugars can be turned into wine. You can even make the beverage out of honey. Such a wine is called "mead" and is supposed to have been the drink of the Roman and

od of making mead and he says, "My recipe is guaranteed to drive dedicated winemakers up a wall, but it does produce results. Anyway, it's a beginning and beginnings are the most important part."

Gary says to get a gallon glass (plastic will do) jug, clean it out well, and wash the container with soan (not the container with soap (not detergent). Then rinse the jug with a little baking soda dissolved in water and, finally, rinse it again — thoroughly — with clean water.

Then put a pint and a half to two pints of honey in the container (the more honey, the stronger the wine), fill it with warm water, and shake. Add a pack or cake of yeast -- the same kind you use for bread - and leave the jug uncapped and sitting in a sink overnight. Expect the brew to foam up and get sticky.

down a bit, put a top on 'em ... but NOT a solid top. What you want is something that allows the gas to escape from the jug (so it won't ex-plode) without letting air (which can turn the wine to vinegar) get in.

One way to do the job is to run plastic or rubber tubing from the otherwise sealed mouth of the container, and let the free end of the hose hang into a glass or bowl of water. Or, if you prefer, you can make a loop in the tubing, pour in a little water, and trap it in the loop to act as a

Nursing

EDMONTON (CP) - Nursing homes are often though of as dumping grounds for the aged — a place where senile old people sit staring blankly at television, says Phyllis Foster of the American Nursing Home Association. She added it shouldn't be that way.

Mrs. Foster, from Denver chairman of the nursing home association's council of activity directors, said workers in nursing homes "should provide the opportunities, the ex-pectations and the support for residents to do as much as they can for themselves."

She told a seminar of recreational and volunteer co-ordinators from nursing homes across Alberta that programs for the elderly should be geared as much as possible to each individual, based on what the person has liked and not liked, the person's past dreams and fears, roles played and present capabili-

Nursing home workers should make every effort to keep the residents in touch with reality, Mrs. Foster said.

When a worker says "good morning Mrs. Jones, how was your breakfast?" he could ensure that the resident, who might lack access to normal guides to reality, knows the time of day, her name and the meal she just ate.

Why Canadians should start saving energy in 1975

ATURE has made us a gift of waterfalls, coal, natural gas, petroleum and uranium. But we're spendthrifts with our resources. We gobble them up. In all the world, only the United States uses more energy per person.

The Prime Minister is calling for a new conservation ethic across Canada. More self-discipline. Many share his view.

"Conservation is now an important part of Canada's overall energy policy."

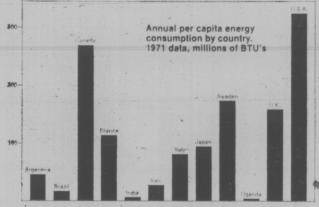

"While we Canadians have enjoyed an exceptionally high standard of living, we have not been as careful in the use of energy resources as have many other countries. However, I do not think that we are alone in needing to absorb the hard lessons of prudence in the management of these resources. Threats to the global environment, and the dramatic increase in monetary costs of energy, are inducing a sobering recognition of the need for improved management of the world's energy resources.

"Conservation is now an important part of Canada's overall energy policy. I wish to make clear that this will be a permanent policy—not a contingency plan enacted in a crisis. We are developing a five-phase program to cope with these times of high-cost resources, to involve all Canadians in a program of energy conservation and to provide, a stable energy future and high quality of life for all Canadians. I believe this program will be welcomed.

"I believe the Canadian public is in a mood to consider realistic options for the efficient use of energy.

"People are looking for guidance on how they can be less wasteful in the use of depleting resources, and are willing to accept minor changes in lifestyles now, rather than suffer a waning standard of living in the future."

> Hon. Donald S. Macdonald Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources

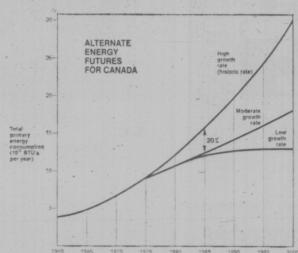

Only the United States has a bigger energy appetite than Canada. The people of Sweden, France, United Kingdom and Japan all use less energy per person than we do.

How much energy should we save?

If we continue to consume at our present rate, we'll need twice as much in 12 years. That means our energy-producing capacity must also double in 12 years.

Economists calculate that to keep up with our appetite, capital costs will soar to over $100 billion over the next 10 years. Money for new generators, dams, powerlines.

uranium and coal mines, gas wells, oil wells and pipelines. It amounts to an investment of about $20,000 for every family in Canada.

At our present rate of growth in consumption we'll need twice as much energy in 12 years, about four times as much by the year 2000. A cut-back of 20% in expected demand by 1985 is surely a realistic goal. Beyond 1985 even greater savings are possible,

There are dozens of thoughtless ways in which we waste energy—in our homes, industries, government and commercial buildings, and in transportation.

The savings can be achieved simply. Turn off the television set when your show is over. Walk to the corner store. Take public transit to work.

Keep your furnace clean. Insulate your home.
Weatherstrip doors and windows. You can save from $50 to $100 right there—plus the energy.

If you are a leader of industry, an engineer, a housing developer, or an architectural planner, look into building designs which have lower requirements for heating and cooling. By introducing conservation measures in existing plants, industrial processes and offices you can also cut operating costs. Remember when you save energy, you save money.

"We are not asked to suffer, but we are asked to be reasonable."

"All of the resources we now take from the earth come at an enormous price. This price is in effect a distress signal, a warning that thoughtless exploitation can in the end lead only to tragedy. To continue our present rate of energy consumption would be to deplete in short order the heritage of countless centuries, to squander mankind's only legacy on this small and finite planet.

"What we face now is not deprivation, but the challenge of sharing. We need not do without, but we must be good stewards of what we have. To ensure nature's continued bounty, we are not asked to suffer, but we are asked to be reasonable."

Rt. Hon. Pierre Trudeau

"Should we waste as much as we do?"

"As a result of the extraordinary progress made over the last several decades in developing food and energy, we came to regard them as relatively cheap and abundant. That has all changed in the space of a few short years. We have become painfully aware that our capacity to produce both these essentials is not unlimited. The growing scarcity of these resources compels us to husband them wisely.

"On a world scale, it is not just an economic problem. It is a moral issue, because for many people and for many countries it is survival which is at stake. Many countries haven't enough energy to meet the basic needs of their people. Millions of people haven't enough to eat. For Canadians this is not a question of economics; it is a matter of conscience.

"Should we live as high as we do?

"Should we waste as much as we do?
"Don't we have a duty to conserve energy?...I believe these are matters for the conscience and private conduct of 23 million Canadians."

Hon. John Turner Minister of Finance

A conservation plan for the '70s

The Canadian Government has already taken steps to put its own house in order. As part of an overall program the Department of National Defence recommended lowering building temperatures to 68 degrees during the day and 65 degrees at night. In a year they saved 5 million gallons of fuel oil worth over $1 million.

A new computer program is "tuning" Government buildings for energy efficiency. And research has been stepped up on several fronts.

The Government is meeting with Provincial Governments to enlist their support and with industries, fuel producers and suppliers to explore ways of increasing energy efficiency in manufacturing and heating.

A program of energy conservation standards, guidelines, taxes and other measures is being designed and implemented to attack the causes of energy waste in our society.

Energy conservation will also play an important role in future transportation, urban and industrial policies.

For the Canadian public, the Government will be releasing a series of helpful, informative messages and information pamphlets. They will tell, in easy detail, how each of us can cut down on our use of energy—and save from $25 to $200 a year in the bargain.

By making modest energy savings now, we can improve our environment and way of life far into the future.

Foremost in declarer's mind, of course, was the ques-tion of how he was going to play the club suit, and he was trying to get a "count" of the opponents' cards to help him to resolve that question. This is the path his thinking took:

carded a heart.

"East, for his two diamond overcall, obviously has five diamonds. He has followed to three spade leads, and has discarded a heart. I know nine of his original 13 cards. Four are unknown to me. West, on the other hand, has been observed to possess one diamond, three spades, and one heart. Hence, eight of his cards are unknown to me.

On this mathematical logic, at trick six Malowan led a club to his king, after which he returned his remaining club and tinessed dummy's ten-sic. The roof now caved in, and Malowan went down three tricks.

The Liberal party presented its version of the throne speech to the legislature Monday and it bore little resemblance to last week's NDP version.

Liberal leader David Anderson presented an alternative speech which included promises to repeal Bill 31, the government's mining royalties legislation; repeal of rent controls; and amendments to Autoplan legislation to allow competition in car insurance.

Anderson said under a Liberal government, the throne speech would have pledged to amend all legislation giving the government unlimited power to invest in private industry. Investment in the private sector hampers the government's ability to regulate industry, he said.

"It's an impulsive govern-ment," said Wallace, adding the NDP needs constructive co-ordination and comprehensive policies.

Priority must now be given to meeting the commitment to the province especially in the areas of education and nursing care for senior citizens.

Dunhill Sought Cost Hush –Socred

The government-owned Dunhill Development Corp. pressured the Coquitlam mayor to revise in secreey a land-use contract for one of its projects, a Socred MLA charged Monday...

Don Phillips (South Peace) charged during question period that the provincial government's housing corporation wanted to hush increases in construction costs at the $7 million housing subdivision in Meadowbrook.

But Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson said no "undue pressure" was used by Dunhill.

"It's naive to expect anything to remain confidential when you're sending it to a municipality," said Nicolson referring to a letter produced by Phillips which was sent from Dunhill to the Coquitlam

The project concerned was purchased for $6.89 million by Dunhill and will provide 176 units on 19 acres. Former owner was North Road Housing Ltd.

The letter to Eric Tiessen, Coquitlam planner, requested details of higher cost 'not be circulated to the public or the Coquitlam alderman."

Signed by Dunhill vicepresident D. M. Howard Sept. 27 it states: "As you can surely understand, it is important that this information (new cost figures) be held by you, the mayor* and your senior staff in confidence."

Phillips questioned why Dunhill was involved in dealing with the municipality on the land-use contract at all when North Roads was reponsible for the agreement in the

The letter said "due to extenuating circumstances, Dunhill has for the time being, assumed an active role in explaining and justifying the price revision."

Nicolson said he didn't "know why Dunhill would ask that it remain in confidence.

Saying he would take Phillips' question as notice, the minister said the land-use contract provisions had "very stringent controls" and if they had not been re-arranged the complex would have been

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald confirmed Monday that his department was requested to intervene in the problem-riddled construction of the Casa Loma housing complex in Burnaby.

He said a request from one of the subcontractors, N.B. Electric Ltd., was received "but we couldn't intervene: many people ask us to intervene in civil court cases but I have to advise them I can't."

have to advise them I can't."

The hotel-motel complex, purchased by the provincial government for $3.18\section million for senior citizens housing, was first raised in the legislature last week when Liberal leader David Anderson charged the government had paid $1 million too much for the complex.

Anderson said the price advertised several months before the government purchase was $1 million less and that some of the 40 subcontractors on the site were forced to settle for payments as low as 40 cents on the dollar.

The Liberal leader had earlier asked for confirmation that the firm made representations to the attorneygeneral's department.

Macdonald said his department could not interfere in matters scheduled to go before civil court cases because "we would be introducing what would be a political solution."

Barrett pledged he will go to the federal-provincial energy conference in Ottawa in April to get an increase to $1.35 per thousand cubic feet of natural gas and ask for a further in-

Wilkinson heard from his solicitor last week that the charge "unlawfully committing theft of a room key" — had been dropped, although he doesn't know the exact reason why.

He said he had received "quite a few calls" of sympathy after the Times story of the incident appeared Feb. 7.

No, Eric Lewis has not given up his fight. The Pat Bay Highway restaurant owner who has been needling local NDPers for months with his anti-government slogans displayed on a sign outside his restaurant, was only being true to his free enterprise philosophy when gas prices replaced the slogans last week.

Highway motorists, used to seeing such sayings as: "We know this government's honest — Nixon told us so" and "Good Knight Eileen", looked up in surprise last week to see the sign reading "Look regular gas 60.9 full service."

Lewis said he had to advertise his new, lower gas price to compete with a self-serve station in Sidney.

But after dozens of phone calls asking if he was giving up the fight or selling the business, Lewis compromised. The sign now reads "Regular gas 60.9. Barrett should go on strike per-manently."

Barrett Stakes Future

91st YEAR, No. 216

Premier Barrett staked his political future on a promise Monday to fill the public purse with revenue from the province's natural resources.

In a 15-minute fist-waving speech in the legislature the premier stated: damned politically if I will ever cave into pressure from oil companies or foreign inter-

'And I will not have them (the federal government) force money down the throats of oil companies and out of the pockets of the public.'

Barrett pledged he will go to to get an increase to $1.35 per thousand cubic feet of natural gas and ask for a further increase to $1.93.

He said the federal government had agreed to the current $1 per thousand cubic feet rate after his representations that the price should be raised to 99 cents — "and I had to send a telegram to the federal minister saying 'a penny for your thoughts'.

Barrett's outburst was sparked by a comment on the government's energy policy by Liberal MLA Gordon Gib-son (North Vancouver-Capilano) who said the premier "went to Ottawa and came back with empty hands and a bag of wind. You alienated them."

The British Columbia energy commission has ordered oil companies in the province not to increase prices for at Last week, the federal gov-

Donald Johannessen, commissioner, said Monday in Vancouver that the Rederal

move took his agency by surprise so "we are asking the oil companies here to delay (to April 1) doing anything and give us time to gauge the impact of prices occurring elsewhere in Canada because of the federal government's

Asked if the energy commission had requested or ordered companies to delay increases, Johannessen said it was an order.

Although such an order is at present unenforceable, the provincial government has only to proclaim sections of the Emergy Amendment Act, passed earlier, to give the commission such powers.
